COMMENTARY

MENA markets recovered in March, led by the appreciation of the Saudi market, which saw inflows from its inclusion into the FTSE Emerging Index. The S&P Pan Arab Investable Index gained 0.72% in March (YTD +2.47%) and the Dow Jones MENA Index appreciated by 2.13% (YTD +7.67%). Islamic markets made a similar recovery of the losses made in February, with the Dow Jones Islamic Market MENA Index rising by 2.07% (YTD +5.60%).

It is worth noting that S&P Dow Jones Indices also changed the country classification of Saudi Arabia from stand-alone to emerging market in its March 2019 quarterly rebalancing, and agreed to introduce Saudi Arabian stocks to the S&P Pan Arab Investable Index in two phases. The first phase (50%) was implemented in March and the second (50%) will take place in September.

The Arab Bank MENA Fund rose 1.07% (YTD +4.11%) and the IIAB Islamic MENA Fund gained 0.85% (YTD +4.42%). In turn, the AB MENA Feeder Fund went up by 1.02% (YTD +3.97%) and the IIAB MENA Feeder Fund rose by 0.80% (YTD +4.27%).

On the regional front, the Saudi TASI rose 3.85% (YTD +12.68%), propelled by the FTSE Emerging Index inclusion and foreign inflows. Saudi Arabia was promoted to secondary emerging market status by FTSE Russell and the first phase of inclusion, with a 10% weight, was carried out in mid-March. Estimates showed the reclassification resulted in USD0.6 billion of foreign inflows. Other gaining indices this past month included the Kuwait Premier Market Index, which jumped 9.21%, and the Bahraini Index, which inched up by 0.05% (YTD +5.69%).

In declining indices, the Jordanian ASE Index retreated 3.91% to nearly erase all the gains it made since the start of 2019 (YTD +0.29%) and in Egypt, the EGX30 Index dropped 0.45% (YTD +13.06%). Furthermore, Oman's MSM30 Index fell by 3.88% (YTD -7.87%); the Qatari Index slipped 0.04% (YTD -1.86%); the Abu Dhabi Index lost 1.23% (YTD +3.25%) and Dubai's DFM Index edged down by 0.03% (YTD +4.15%).

Oil prices rose considerably in March; Brent oil rose 5.10% (YTD +32.44%) and WTI oil gained 3.57% (YTD +27.12%). Saudi Arabia's Energy Minister said that there would be no change in OPEC+ output policy in the group's meeting in April. A committee of the most influential members in the alliance (including Russia, Iraq, and the UAE) agreed to go beyond their pledged supply cuts in the coming months. However, the group said it is too early to decide on whether cuts should be extended into the second half of the year. The committee reflected on what they described as "critical uncertainties" in the oil market, particularly the threat of U.S. sanctions on Iranian and Venezuelan oil.

In other news, the European Union added the UAE and Oman to its expanded tax haven blacklist. These blacklisted states face stricter controls on transactions with the EU, although no sanctions have been agreed upon by EU states yet. EU documents showed that Italy and Estonia objected to the new list as they opposed the inclusion of the United Arab Emirates, however, Italy received guarantees that the UAE would be removed once it adopted legislation that would make it compliant with EU tax standards.

Around the world, fears of a downturn in the global economy arose as analysts began comparing debt levels with those of a decade ago. S&P said the global economy may indeed be headed toward a credit downturn, but a crisis, if any, is unlikely to be as dramatic as in 2008. S&P noted that while global debt levels are higher, contagion risk is lower.

The U.S. market continued in its upward trajectory for the year with the S&P 500 Index appreciating by 1.79% (YTD +13.07%) and the Dow Jones Industrial Average Index gaining 0.05% (YTD +11.15%). In new Fed developments, the latest meeting saw officials holding interest rates once again, indicating that no more hikes will be coming this year. The Fed's patient approach to monetary policy is allowing inflation to reassert itself, says San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank President, Mary Daly. The decision was unanimous and aligned with market expectations and demands. The Fed currently holds its benchmark funds rate in a range of 2.25% to 2.5%.

In European markets, the French CAC 40 Index rose 2.10% (YTD +13.10%), the German DAX Index nudged up 0.09% (YTD +9.16%), and the U.K.'s FTSE 100 Index jumped 2.89% (YTD +8.19%). Moreover, in the Far East, the Nikkei Index shed 0.84% (YTD +5.95%); the Hang Seng Index rose 1.46% (YTD +12.40%) and the Shanghai Composite Index advanced by 5.09% (YTD +23.93%).

We remain committed to fundamentally driven positioning, with a focus on high dividend yielding stocks, with concentrations in deeply discounted value plays. We will be monitoring the markets closely in the next few months, hunting for overbeaten stocks in the aftermath of the market upgrades expected to take place, and the fizzling out of momentum trades.
