COMMENTARY

MENA markets experienced another downturn this month albeit less severe than the last. The S&P Pan Arab Investable Index lost 1.43%, nearly reversing its performance since the start of the year (YTD +0.50%). Furthermore, the Dow Jones MENA Index dropped 1.14% but maintained a healthier yearly performance (YTD +4.12%). In addition, in regional Islamic markets, the Dow Jones Islamic Market MENA Index lost 0.87% (YTD +0.77%).

The Arab Bank MENA Fund lost 0.23% (YTD +6.28%) and the IIAB Islamic MENA Fund shed 0.76% (YTD +6.91%). In turn, the AB MENA Feeder Fund rose lost 0.28% (YTD +5.90%) and the IIAB MENA Feeder Fund lost 0.81% (YTD +6.49%).

The OECD cut almost all economic forecasts in its latest outlook as protectionist policies continue to take a toll on confidence and investment, and risks mount on financial markets. The organization believes governments are not doing enough to prevent the long-term damage that might result from the intensifying trade conflicts, which has sent global growth rates plummeting to lows last seen during the financial crisis. The OECD is the latest institution sounding the alarm over the state of the global economy, where manufacturing has endured the worst of the economic crisis brought on by the ongoing trade war between China and the U.S.

The region's equity market indices had mixed performances. In advancing markets, outside the GCC, the Jordanian ASE Index rose 0.36% (YTD -4.25%), while in the GCC, the Qatari Index gained 1.31% (YTD +0.66%), the Saudi Arabian TASI increased by 0.90% (YTD +3.39%), and Oman's MSM30 Index went up by 0.32% (YTD -7.08%). In the UAE, the DFM General Index appreciated 0.81% (YTD +9.93%), meanwhile the Abu Dhabi Index fell 2.10% (YTD +2.89%). Among other declining markets, the Kuwaiti Premier Market Index dropped 5.41% (YTD +17.23%), the Bahraini Index lost 1.08% (YTD +13.41%), and, finally, the Egyptian EGX30 Index fell by 3.89% (YTD +9.37%).

According to a report by Fitch Ratings, a "significant portion" of the USD23 billion loans made to Dubai government-related entities maturing at the end of 2021 may need to be restructured again. Banks in the UAE, still dealing with the consequences of Dubai's 2010 property crisis, are at risk once again due to falling home prices and non-performing loans. Prices have been impacted by oversupply, weaker consumer sentiment (due to lower oil prices), and a less supportive economic environment.

In Saudi Arabia, drones attacked two plants at the heart of Saudi Arabia's oil industry on 14 September, knocking out more than half the kingdom's output, which, according to a statement by Aramco, is about 5.7 million barrels per day or 5% of global oil supply. However, the country had supposedly restored full oil output by the end of the month.

In other Saudi news, the kingdom is considering a proposal to offer investors a much bigger stake in Aramco than previously planned. The Saudi Royal Court and its advisers have been debating an eventual float of as much as 10% of the company, compared to the country's longstanding public intention to list just 5%. According to Bloomberg's sources, Saudi Aramco could kick off its IPO process around 20 October, ahead of a potential listing on Tadawul in November. The company hopes to achieve a minimum USD2 trillion valuation. However, this information contradicts two other sources who said that the IPO is unlikely to take place this year due to the recent attacks on two of the company's facilities.

Saudi finance minister expects total GDP for 2019 to be significantly less than previously forecasted because of OPEC-led oil output cuts, and not due to the attack on Aramco. He did not give any projections for 2019 GDP growth, but the IMF has said it could grow 1.9% this year, slower than 2.2% in 2018.

At the same time, the majority of international equity markets had positive performances in September. The U.S.'s S&P 500 gained 1.72% (YTD +18.74%) and the Dow Jones Index rose 1.95% (YTD +15.39%). Over in Europe, the French CAC 40 appreciated 3.60% (YTD +20.02%), the German DAX advanced 4.09% (YTD +17.70%), and the U.K.'s FTSE 100 went up by 2.79% (YTD +10.11%). In the Far East, the Nikkei Index jumped 5.08% this month (YTD +8.70%), the Hang Seng gained 1.43% (YTD +0.95%), and the Shanghai Composite Index rose 0.66% (YTD +16.49%).

The U.S. Federal Reserve voted to lower the Federal Funds target rate by 25bps to a range of 1.75% - 2.00%, and though the central bank's forecast showed no further rate cuts, the members of the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) were actually divided on what action the Fed should take moving forward. The last time the Fed released a forecast, the central bank said it did not expect any cuts until 2020.

In the commodities space, spot gold managed to lose 3.15% (YTD +14.81%) from August's closing price, which was the highest in 6 years. In the energy sector, Brent oil gained 0.58% (YTD +12.97%) and WTI oil shed 1.87% (YTD +19.07%).
